According to the federal Department of Transportation, all trailers with a GVWR rating of 10,000 pounds or greater are required to have the following safety equipment installed and operating properly for legal interstate travel:

- Braking system installed on each wheel that is actually rolling on the ground.
- Red and white reflective tape for conspicuity is required to be on both sides and rear of trailer.
- Front corner clearance, side clearance and three center rear clearance marker lights, as well as stop, tail and turn signals, and a battery operated brake breakaway system with pull tether switch.
- A single axle brake is not enough to pass federal DOT standards as it is only rated to stop one axle's worth of weight.
- You should contact your local DOT office to make sure what equipment is required in your area.
